Hartigan (‘John O’Brien’) (1877–1952). Browne (‘Rolf Boldrewood’) (1826–1913) and Patrick Walter George Henderson (1870–1957); Thomas Alexander

The Browne family on the verandah of 642 Olive Street in 1892. Seated are Margaret Browne (left), Robert Browne (right) and Rose Brown (foreground).
(1)—728 Kiewa Street.
The residence of the lawyer, poet and novelist Walter George Henderson. ‘Lahoo’ was built in the 1920s. Please respect that it is private property.

(2)—Queen Elizabeth II Square.
The Performing Arts Centre opened in 1964 and provides a venue for touring theatre companies and local performances.

(3)—603 David Street.

(4)—515 Smollett Street.
St. Patrick’s Presbytery. Residence and place of work of the poet Rev. Patrick Hartigan (‘John O’Brien’).

(5)—609 Nurigong Street.
The former Turk’s Head Hotel (now Albury Regional Museum), John Farrell’s pub owned by his friend and (later) business partner Luke Gulson.

(6)—David Street cnr Fallon Street.

(7)—642 Olive Street.
From 1888–1893 the residence of Thomas A. Browne (a.k.a. ‘Rolf Boldrewood’), author of Robbery under Arms. Margaret Browne wrote here The Flower Garden in Australia, the first gardening book written by an Australian woman.

(8)—540 Swift Street.
From 1961 to 1999 this building housed The Border Mail, Albury’s remaining daily newspaper (founded in 1903). Today the building is the home of the commercial radio station 2AY (FM 104.9).

(9)—Dean Street.
Albury Court House. Place of work for police magistrate Thomas A. Browne (‘Boldrewood’) (1835–1899) and lawyer Walter G. Henderson (1869–1950).

(10)—457 Smollett Street.
Location of the Wanderer’s Club, a hostel for many travelling bushmen. ’Billy’ Wye lived here near the end of his life.